The Headmaster will submit the Nature Diaries to the examiner at least two weeks before the examination and the examiner will send back the diaries to the school not later than the 1st May 1937 after valuing them and drawing up his report about the work done in the school for the consideration of the Board and the Inspecting Officer.

3. The practical portion of the examination may be held before or after the theoretical examination. The exact dates for the centre will be fixed by the examiner concerned and communicated to the Headmaster of the Training School and the District Inspectors of Schools. The maximum marks assigned for the practical examination are 500, of which 100 are for correct pronunciation and clear enunciation, 75 for blackboard work, 75 for hand-made teaching devices and 250 for general teaching skill. The marks reserved for hand-made teaching devices should be allotted to an examination in the subject held at the time. In case of failures of regular candidates their work done during their stay at school should also be taken into consideration. The private candidates must bring with them exhibits made in accordance with handwork syllabus for Secondary Training Schools (certified by some responsible person to be their own work) and will be required to prepare any of them at the time of the examination. 6. Four weeks from the date of the examination shall be granted to examiners for submitting marks provided that when an examiner has not more than a hundred papers to examine, the time allowed shall be two weeks.

7. Examiners are requested to notify to this office along with the last batch of marks the number of answer books they have examined and to submit a short report on the quality of work done by the candidates. The report shall give a statement showing the percentage of passes and embody such remarks and recommendations suggested by the work done by the candidates as the examiner thinks it desirable in the interest of education to communicate to the head of the school. It shall be of a perfectly general character, dealing with the quality of work as a whole, and while embodying concrete and positive suggestions for the improvement of the answers of the candidates and drawing attention to the most frequent errors, it should not ordinarily contain criticisms of the work or the results of the school.

8. The examiners will send to the undersigned the answer papers soon after the results are published and a bill (not more than one) of contingent charges with proper vouchers for every item included therein.

If in case of a particular item of expenditure it is not possible to obtain a voucher the examiner should submit a certificate in the form which will be supplied from this office on requisition.

10. With the necessary question papers despatched to the Superintendent there will be sent a packet containing one copy of each of the papers set for the examination whether or not those papers appear to be required at the centre. If no copy of the paper which is required is found to have been sent, this 'emergency packet' should be opened and the necessary paper should be taken out, the packet being at once re-sealed by the office in charge; otherwise the packet should be returned unopened to the undersigned at the close of the examination. If the packet is so opened the reason should be stated.

The Superintendent as soon as he receives the cloth bundle containing the question papers will open it and compare the number of question papers and the name of the subjects noted on the separate sealed covers contained in the bundle, with the indent sheet. If any difference is found between the two he will at once inform this office. The sealed covers containing the question papers are in no case to be opened before the time of examination.
